UGA Summer Classics Institute

Each year the Institute offers a variety of undergraduate and graduate Latin and Classics courses, including, in odd-numbered years, Intensive Beginning Greek and, in even-numbered years, Intensive Beginning Latin. The Institute curriculum is supplemented by workshops and guest lectures by visiting Master Teachers and other scholars. The program is designed especially for Latin teachers who wish to continue their education or earn a Master's degree in Latin on a summers-only basis. The fifteen faculty members of the Department of Classics share in a tradition of cooperation with high school teachers and programs that culminates each summer in an exciting and challenging curriculum. Here are the offerings for the summer of 2009:

Scholarship Assistance:

Scholarships are available from the Department; teachers are also encouraged to apply for scholarships offered by organizations such as the American Classical League and the Classical Association of the Middle West and South.

Admissions:

All participants in the Institute must also be admitted to the University of Georgia, either as Degree or Non-Degree students. To apply to the Graduate School, go to <http://www.grad.uga.edu/admissions>; for supporting materials required by the Classics Department, go to http://www.classics.uga.edu/summer/institute/app\_packet.html. Applications and supporting documents must be received no later than April 1 (March 1 for foreign students). Former Institute students who did not attend last year's Institute will need to complete a brief re-application form for re-admission to the Graduate School at <http://www.grad.uga.edu/admissions>. For Institute information, contact Sandra Phillips at grading@uga.edu or Professor Rick LaFleur, at rlafleur@uga.edu, or write to the Department of Classics, 221 Park Hall, University of Georgia, Athens, GA 30602-6203.

Facilities

The Department of Classics houses both the ALEXANDER ROOM, a quiet, comfortable reading room and reference library with approximately 3,200 volumes, and the TIMOTHY NOLAN GANTZ CLASSICS COMPUTING CENTER, a state-of-the-art facility for its students, and is adjacent to the three-million volume UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA MAIN LIBRARY.
